

Abstract

The present invention creates a program-controlled unit having a single controller core that has a first and at least a second execution unit, which units are operable independently of one another in a first operating mode, and process the same instructions in parallel in a second operating mode.

(Figure 1)